While waiting for 10am – Week 6

Recommendations

Once you've sorted your cards, count them again for 13 - in case one is unfanned behind another. (I know people who seem to always lose a card that makes their bidding a bit iffy!) Check you don't have any mixed suits.

(I count them by saying the shape, "5431" or whatever, and checking it adds to 13.)

Some people like to use a bidding box card as a flag to remind what the auction is. I believe this is strictly incorrect, but have never known anyone object to the practice. It shouldn't be necessary to do this.

Keep a count of trumps played. Preferably keep a note of which of the top 5 trumps remain unlocated.

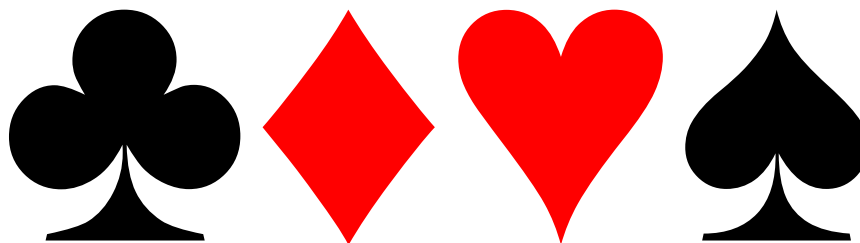

Hold your cards up, so that opponents cannot see them. It is apparently NOT illegal for an opponent to see your cards if you hold them badly. It is illegal for your partner to see your cards (except dummy when on the table of course).

Week 6 A review of Week 5 hands

Original topic

The original plan was to cover Declarer's plan and play of a No Trump contract deal.

New topic

However the results from last session's set hands were significantly different from the reference results. Therefore I want to cover the bidding of some of those hands and also their opening leads.

"Plan and play" can be postponed until after this presentation.

2D would be a Negative response, and {E} has enough Pts to make a Positive D bid. Hence #3D.

What {W} now knows:

L5+D, 8+Pts

(or 7Pts : D:AKxxx).

It won't be L4D as that would have resulted in 2NT.

Week 5 Hand 3

This one is more interesting, in that the achieved score when played in the "wrong" contract was better than the reference score.

However much of bridge bidding and play is using the percentages and sometimes the expected result doesn't work. It is still the case that using the recommended scheme will get the the best results overall.

Also perhaps the play wasn't ideal. Maybe the defence could have kept Declarer down to a result less than that of the Reference.

Late news: In the set hand play today, the correct bid made an extra trick, thus beating the wrong bid. This doesn't prove anything, but is "kind'a reassuring"!
